Noble.com, LLC, a leading defense procurement and technology company, announced today that it had closed its acquisition of Federal Resources. Noble, a privately held global supply chain company headquartered in greater Boston, provides services in global supply chain management, expeditionary logistics, mission support, distribution and fulfillment, and streamlined procurement to U.S. Government and DoD customers. Federal Resources, located in Stevensville, Maryland, supplies highly technical safety and security solutions serving the U.S. military, federal government, and state and local first responders.

This news follows Noble's March 2021 acquisition of Tactical & Survival Specialties, Inc., (TSSi), a mission-focused equipment and logistics provider to military, law enforcement, and disaster response professionals worldwide.

"Together, we will provide more customers with mission-focused, single-source procurement and just-in-time delivery," said Tom Noble, the company's co-founder and CEO. "In complex and shifting threat environments around the world, we will simplify our customers' operations, and their lives, by connecting them seamlessly with the products and services of more than 13,000 suppliers."

The CEO called the deal a turning point for the people of both organizations. "We're combining our experience, expertise and offerings," he said, "along with our integrated systems, cutting-edge data analytics, and customized user interfaces, to serve our great customers better than ever."
